John S Sayward, Editor.

SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1851.

☞ The Fast Day discourse of Rev Mr Mallby was devoted to show the utter repugnance with which its author regards all plans and influences designed as a mutual guide or a cure of any moral evil which afflicts any portion of mankind unless the idea of a divine atonement is kept distinctly in view and the whole conducted with reference to the doctrines of the Evangelical Christian churches Anything short of a recognition and statement of these doctrines as the basis of reform he regarded as an attempt to supercede the Christian church and therefore infidel in its tendency and the success of such enterprises either in popular associations by the press or the delivery of lectures was to say the triumph of infidelity over the Christian religion He had no objection to the existence of popular associations for literary scientific or social purposes a secular press or public lectures but whenever and whe ever they attempted to provide anything like a remedy for intemperance or any of the moral evils which afflict society they were however unwittingly or unintentionally yet substantially of infidel tendency by attempting to supercede the church they were attempting to make use of the lesser for the greater and all sufficient means of reformation He referred by way of illustration of this to what we understood to be the lecture of Rev Mr Stebbins of Boston delivered before the Mercantile Association on the Moral influences of Revolutions In this lecture the results of revolutions were clearly stated but there was no direct reference to the hand of God controlling those revolutions and producing the moral results but the whole lesson was left as though revolutions themselves were the cause of the results He did not suppose that this was exactly his intended understanding of the subject but it was left in fact a yielding to what the preacher deemed the infidel tendencies of the popular sentiment and which had made inroads in the church and even into the Christian pulpit and against which a word of warning was deemed necessary

The eloquent preacher referred directly and effectively to the modern advocacy of woman's rights as of infidel tendency, and deemed it as absurd as to insist that women should have the right to shave and sing bass Transcendentalism he thought was well personified by the shadow of a man jumping and barking and gazing vacantly upon—nothing

The preacher was awake, earnest zealous and borne along by a large nervous energy which might be expected from the aggressive character of the discourse

It is not our province of course nor our intention to question the correctness of the positions assumed by the preacher, but the interest awakened by the discourse has led us to conclude that a brief statement of its leading principles might be a matter of wide general interest

We are all the embarrassed notwithstanding the numerous qualifications and somewhat nice distinctions found in the language employed to check allegations Our difficulty lies somewhat in the direction of the inference that the theoretical points of the preacher Here are a class of members onward to meet the darkness and the evils of a temperance there are families abused, debased trodden upon and beaten the Almshouse is crowded the jail tenanted and the House of Correction peopled, and thousands of sad hearts and busy hands are actively employed to say it is madly rushing stream of special action and to restore peace and comfort to the family and to lift up the intemperate to a life of usefulness and respectability Shall we say that all these instrumentalities are of infidel tendency and such christians we must not their sympathies nor take part in such enterprises?

Slavery with its crushing weight of oppression, imbruing the hands of millions and taking away from them the essential elements of true manhood Shall we join in no movement of the masses of men whose deeds and hearts have been touched to relieve to that part of the world and who are willing to put forth practical efforts for the amelioration and removal of the colossal iniquity under the declaration to do so would be promoting infidel tendencies?

So too of gambling of licensed houses of storebreaking and of many of the popular evils rampant in society Shall we not endeavor to raise the shield of just laws against them not unite with others for their suppression not be active to bring the social power of the community and the press as one of the press and the fear of the prison house and the deprivation of personal liberty as means of correction and to effect some practical and immediate reform, least we be found asking infidel sentiments and trying to supercede the church?

It has been the right and advantage to our times that by means of popular associations and the public press the active men of large wealth of the community could be brought to bear upon the evils which have made so many groan with distress and to effect a change and push back their aggressions and raise men to nobler aims If these popular enterprises have been compared to the bright and majesty of a train of hard breathing and car rattling locomotives upon the iron rail Working out good to human society Shall they be lessened and shall they be discouraged to continued efforts or shall we jump upon their path and endeavor to beat them back?

Rev. Mr. Caldwell's Lecture at Eastport

We were unable to be present at the delivery of Mr Caldwell's lecture before the Mercantile association on a few weeks since, but have heard it frequently spoken of as a paper of able performance This was to be expected, as he is a very able and popular preacher and a devoted Pastor of the First Baptist Church and is a gorgeous writer and a clear thinker a close student and a growing man

We learn from the Eastport Sentinel that Mr Caldwell has delivered this lecture before the Lyceum in that town and that paper speaks in the following high terms of its reception —

"The closing Lecture before our Lyceum by Rev Mr Caldwell, of Bangor, was delivered on the ablest of the season Its subject was 'The Influence of Geography upon the History and Destiny of Man' and was treated in a very original able and lucid manner The style of the lecturer is nervously strong and peculiar, seemed to electrify the audience and make them willing to yield to his arguments whether disposed or nor—but, so plausible were his deductions added to the charms of his logic and his oratorical ornaments, that the mind drank in with pleasure what was at once so wholesome and refreshing The lecture was well worth importing from Bangor,

We observe no little amount of improvement in the gentleman since he came from Massachusetts to Bangor, some five years ago His style is plainer, and his matter more substantial, and he may now rank with No 1 lecturers,

☞ Mr Webster and his family arrived at Boston on Friday last and he was greeted with a welcome by a number of his friends.

Damage by the Freshet at Hallowell

The rain of Tuesday night last caused a heavy freshet Mill Brook in Hallowell

The Kennebec Journal states that two dams of the Cascade Company were destroyed the Mills but slightly damaged, and several casks of oil lost

Messrs Mullikens Hubbard lose about $600 in wool and casks carried off from their establishment

The whirling mill of Simon Page was stove in on one side and a large quantity of whirling destroyed

The blacksmith shop owned and occupied by Ishael M McClintock was entirely demolished. Loss $800

The flood swept away the bridge being the one crossed by the rail road to Gardiner

The building owned by Sawyer situated below the bridge and occupied by Thompson Co Blacking as a wool pulling establishment was carried off the water entering and sweeping everything into the Kennebec They lose about 5000 pounds of wool The building was damaged to the amount of some hundreds of dollars

It is thought that the whole amount of damage from the freshet will be about $10 000

☞ We learn that the recent freshet in the Androscoggin stream has brought down a very large quantity of logs and caused some damage to the dams and mills. At the Dudley Mills in Poland the stream cut for itself a new channel leaving the mill high and dry A million of lumber in logs came down and jammed against the new bridge at Strickland's Mills and fortunately the bridge stood the pressure and thus prevented the inevitable destruction of nearly all the dams and mills below had the bridge given away, and the whole mass been precipitated down the stream

☞ The New Castle (Me) Democrat states that Henry Sproule, John McClain, and an Indian son of Sockbasin the Doctor, all of Bremen and Charles Genther of Waldoboro who left Bremen in a boat on a fishing excursion on Tuesday last, were lost by the upsetting of the boat Sproul leaves a wife and two children and McClain a wife and seven children

☞ Mr Moody, the popular auctioneer, has a fancy goods hand to-day on disposing of the rich millinery goods in the store of Mrs. Mellen on State str et. He desires and expects a large and fashionable company of ladies as well as gentlemen

The Farm-School

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

I thank your correspondent 'Alpha,' for calling my attention to the 14th 16th and 18th sections of 'an act to provide for the education of youth passed August 17, 1850 and, that I may not be misapprehended, I ask for the publication of those sections

They are as follows

Sec 14 Any town is hereby authorized and empowered to make all needful provisions and arrangements concerning the schools thereof, and shall have power to establish schools for children between the ages of six and fifteen years of age attending school without any regular and lawful occupation and growing up in ignorance and may also make all such ordinances and by laws respecting such children as shall be most conducive to their welfare and the good order of such town and there shall be annexed to such ordinances suitable penalties not exceeding for any one breach a fine of twenty dollars Provided, that said ordinances and by laws shall be approved by the district court for the district and shall not be repugnant to the laws of the State

Sec 15 The several towns, availing themselves of the provisions of the preceding section, shall appoint at their annual meetings three or more persons who alone shall be authorized to make complaints in every case of the violation of said ordinances or by laws to the justice of the peace or other judicial officer who by said ordinances shall have jurisdiction in the case and whose duty it shall be to prosecute such complaints and to see that the penalties of said ordinances are enforced

Sec 16 The selectors of the peace or other judicial officers in all cases, at their discretion in place of the fine aforesaid shall be authorized to order children proved before them to be growing up in truancy and without the benefit of the education provided for them by law, to be placed for such periods of time as they may judge expedient in such institution of instruction, or house of reformation or other suitable situation as may be agreed on and provided for the purpose under the authority conferred by the fourteenth section of this act, in each town availing itself of the powers therein granted

Thus we see that a truant child, being convicted of truancy is liable to a penalty of twenty dollars or less on conviction of the first offence (a new one in our penal code) or, in place of a fine the court are authorized to order the child proved before them to be growing up in truancy to be placed in some institution of instruction or house of reformation or other suitable situation as long as the court see fit

Your correspondent thinks an institution to be called a Farm School, should be established to which such truant boys should be sent for instruction and reformation

Will such a place of confinement differ from a House of Correction except in name only? It is those convicted of some violation of law alone who can be received into such school of instruction or house of reformation as is term'd in the law The legislature have raised the age of placing truant to the dignity of an offence against the State and it must be tried as such They have given power to any piece of the peace to punish the offender by sentencing the convicted to a place of confinement for years or what is equivalent to it; for such period of time as he shall judge expedient Now what can you call such place an institution for instruction or house of reformation or Farm School but is still a piece of confinement Sanitary may be but still a place where none but those convicted of truancy can be compelled to go

Unless I was not aware of such a law the poor correspondent called my attention to it and it only remains to see in what way it can be enforced It seems somewhat unusual in some of its provisions but I am for obeying laws and not resisting them

A school might be established at the City Farm and as the Farm house and an instructor employed who is suitably qualified as a teacher of the branches usually taught in our public schools To such a school convicted truants may be sent by our police Judge by the mayor and the officers chosen for that purpose But they must be fed and clothed, as well as instructed, at the city expense and thus, as I suppose it must be a farm school or school at the farm house or elsewhere as provided for in the act cannot be established as a place of confinement except for those who have been convicted of some violation of law

But your correspondent would have the school in some remote part of the city away from the House of Correction lest the child should be disgraced by its proximity It is ministerial where it is located The inmates of both institutions are in the custody of the law the one for reformation the other for instruction But it is quite important, in a financial point of view, that as little expense as possible should be incurred in administering the law as contemplated by the legislature They had in mind no Utopian scheme no plan by which rag and ash children should be maintained and educated at the public expense educated too in a manner superior to others in the principles of farming as well as in the common branches of instruction no design that every or any town in the State should establish a Farm School of the kind and for the purposes which seems to be contemplated by your correspondent.

If, then our city government shall see fit to adopt the act and make the necessary by laws and ordinances, and the proper committee to make complaints, our streets will soon be cleansed of those vagrant children and habitual truants who neglect the very ample provision which is made for their education in our public schools

This can be done without purchasing another farm and building an institution of instruction thereto at great expense, and I hope in the present state of our city finances that no new and untried experiments will be attempted especially as the law can be better carried out with our present appliances

A Look Backward.

It is unpleasant to look back A retrospective glance always shows us something wrong or misguided in our past life In the trivialities and atoms of our days, we perceive that we have been thoughtless and regardless These atoms united compose the major portion of the brief existence through which we have already passed. How many fragments of time have been wasted, how have the moments strayed, and how has the value of hours and days been forgotten! How have weeks sometimes glided past us like clouds,—noticed only as shadows, as frail vapors driven by the wind, —time of priceless value! Thus has run the stream of life Thus do we travel the short journey from the cradle to the grave, —a journey to most full of sorrows and disappointments, but to some (what it might be to all) joyous and full of varied pleasures In all our deviations from the true path in every false step and movement, we feel the want of experience Were we to start anew on the journey of life —possessed with the knowledge and experience of years how differently would we direct our course —how we would avoid these by paths and delusive attractions—how we would shun the gay illusions which flatter around us not to give but to drive away pleasure—how we would task the mind and body with faithful exercise —not always indulging them in a needed rest A new starting point given to the man who has been studious of his ways—who has treasured up wealth from experience and observation —who has kept a keen eye on the word and its decrees and who has sought to realize and answer the object of his existance by observing just relations with all things material and ideal would indeed be the beginning of a new life In his second career for the true gold of life he would dig deeper and wider In his ascent on for spiritual joys and in his sweeping flights after ideal pleasures, higher and broader would he range and fly He would no waste that precious time which well spent here will add degrees to the excellence of a nother life He would not delay nor cultivate barren sands when fertile meads and rich soils invite his ready hand to labor To him there would be no wasted fragments of life every tree flower plant and star would be a text book, every thing around he would study and enjoy, as parts of the great creation
